Peter J. Fitzsimmons

Successful technology, energy and financial services executive with extensive executive management, entrepreneurial, sales, technology, operations and finance experience in the banking, real estate and SAAS technology markets. In his capacities as a chief executive and financial officer and senior advisor, Peter has led and developed teams across a diverse range of companies in the technology, energy and financial services verticals – stretching from start-up technology companies to community and top 20 national banks. He leverages his extensive business, technology, financial and operations experience with growth-oriented companies and creates strategic value for all stakeholders. He is a founder and managing principal of strategic advisory firm Jetrise Ventures and Jetrise Energy focused on enterprise technology, renewable energy and artificial intelligence. Jetrise Ventures is dedicated to helping exceptional entrepreneurs, key real estate partners and mid-market companies build innovative, lasting and market disruptive businesses and projects in the artificial intelligence community, renewable energy generation and storage and financial services markets. Through an investing approach to partnering, his firm collaborates with business owners to provide the capital, resources, and experience with industry contacts to accelerate their growth and then achieve long-term success. His firm helps their portfolio companies and projects realize the business vision with hands on, effective and efficient resources that enable growth capital to optimally impact the strategic road map and core objectives. Emphasizing synergy in their collaborative and investment focused approach enables them to drive the advantages of a cohesive, cooperative team through aligned interests and active participation at every step. Peter's group is the business partner who's in the trenches with their client and client's team, they are side by side to do what it takes to make their business succeed.
